THE JOCKEY CLUB ANNOUNCES PLAN TO FUND BASELINE CONCUSSION TESTS FOR JOCKEYS

The Jockey Club announced today that it will fund baseline concussion testing for all jockeys who use the Jockey Health Information System (JHIS).

The JHIS, which was created in October 2008, is a database that stores jockeys' updated medical histories and enables emergency medical personnel at racetracks to instantly access that information in the event of injury. There is no cost for any racetrack or jockey to participate in the JHIS. It can be accessed via a new module of InCompass' Race Track Operations system.

"Baseline concussion testing has become an integral part of any safety regimen in professional and amateur sports alike," said James L. Gagliano, president and chief operating officer of The Jockey Club. "The topic was addressed at the International Jockeys' Health, Safety & Welfare Conference at Monmouth Park in September, and we've all read about the testing being done with football players and, most recently, NASCAR drivers. We are pleased to use the platform of the JHIS to offer this service to the riders."

"On behalf of the Jockeys' Guild and its members, I want to truly thank The Jockey Club for its continued support for the welfare of riders," said Terry Meyocks, national manager of the Jockeys' Guild. "It is my hope that every rider will take advantage of this opportunity, and we look forward to working with the tracks and riders to see that it is widely promoted."

The creation and development of the JHIS featured collaboration among InCompass, The Jockey Club Technology Services Inc., the Jockeys' Guild, Keeneland and Dr. Barry Schumer, Keeneland's medical director, who developed the original concept and consulted on the project. Keeneland is the only track in the country that requires jockeys to sign up for the JHIS.

InCompass, a subsidiary of The Jockey Club, plans to acquire a package of these tests, which would be administered free of charge by a medical professional at each track if the rider agrees to enroll in JHIS.

“This is a win-win situation for jockeys if ever there was one,” said Dr. Schumer, who has been associated with Keeneland for more than 30 years. “Baseline concussion testing is a crucial component that will help track medical personnel make appropriate return-to-ride assessments following head injuries. Storing this information securely in the jockey’s JHIS medical history makes it accessible whenever and wherever they ride and helps us protect our rider’s immediate and long-term health and welfare.”

“Keeneland is proud to be the first racetrack to introduce baseline concussion testing for jockeys, and we are grateful to The Jockey Club and Dr. Schumer for their continued efforts to enhance the safety of our riders,” said Bill Thomason, president and chief executive officer of Keeneland Association.

*The Jockey Club, founded in 1894 and dedicated to the improvement of Thoroughbred breeding and racing, is the breed registry for North American Thoroughbreds. In fulfillment of its mission, The Jockey Club provides support and leadership on a wide range of important industry initiatives and it serves the information and technology needs of owners, breeders, media, fans and farms, among others. ## BURCH TO RETIRE AS PRESIDENT OF THE JOCKEY CLUB TECHNOLOGY SERVICES; PALMER NAMED AS SUCCESSOR

Robert A. (Bobby) Burch, who paved the technology path for The Jockey Club and its affiliated companies over the past 29 years, will retire as president of The Jockey Club Technology Services Inc. (TJCTS) at the end of 2013. He will be succeeded by Vice President of Software Development Harold J. Palmer, who has played an integral role with The Jockey Club enterprise for the past 30 years.

The announcement was made today by James L. Gagliano, president and chief operating officer of The Jockey Club.

Burch will serve as a consultant to The Jockey Club.

“It is difficult, if not impossible, to appreciate the size and scope of technological innovation—from the first personal computers in the early 1980s to the high-performance apps of today—that has evolved in the past three decades, and Bobby Burch richly deserves credit for leading those successful and wide-ranging efforts at The Jockey Club,” Gagliano said. “Technical expertise has become a hallmark of The Jockey Club, and his vast experience and deep knowledge will be invaluable as he transitions into a consulting role for us.

“In a similar vein, Harold Palmer has a keen understanding of the Thoroughbred landscape and a wealth of experience with virtually every technological change at The Jockey Club over that same period of time, so he is perfectly suited to manage the strategic direction of TJCTS in the years ahead,” Gagliano said.

Burch joined The Jockey Club staff in 1985, was promoted to vice president, Information Technology Group, in 1997, and to president of TJCTS in 2002.

Palmer joined The Jockey Club staff in 1983, was promoted to director, Software Development, in 1997, and to vice president, Software Development, in 2002.

TJCTS provides technology solutions that encompass software development, technology consulting, and hosting and managed services, and it operates a 24x7 network operations/data center. Formerly known as The Jockey Club’s Information Technology Group, it was repositioned as a wholly owned subsidiary of The Jockey Club in a 2002 restructuring of The Jockey Club companies.

In addition to serving the technological needs of The Jockey Club’s Registry, The Jockey Club Information Systems Inc., InCompass Solutions Inc., and Equibase, TJCTS has also provided various forms of technology solutions for clients such as the New York Racing Association, Daily Racing Form, National Thoroughbred Racing Association, Breeders’ Cup Ltd., Keeneland Association, Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, and Horse Races Now.

TIPS FOR WINTER LOT MUD PREVENTION

Winter and the mud comes in the in-between season is right around the corner. Getting your dry lots as “mudproof” as possible helps to keep it manageable as the season gets wetter, according to Laurie Cerny, editor and publisher of good-horsekeeping.com.

“We just got three inches of rain in 24 hours. You would think my pens would be mud pits, but they’re not. I attribute this to being diligent about picking up manure daily and raking up any uneaten hay,” Cerny says.

“I’ve also learned that if you don’t stay on top of these two tasks you’ll regret it once we get into the winter,” she adds.

Here are some other tips for keeping mud under control in your pens:

- Don’t feed hay in pens, or if you do: feed only your best hay. When horses eat all of the hay it won’t get mixed in the dirt, which contributes to mud.
- Consider feeding hay pellets in pens; horses don’t waste these.
- Position your feeders on the highest spot possible in a pen (this will help drainage away from the spot) and move periodically (this will give the spot a rest).
- Pick up manure daily. Manure mixed with dirt instantly creates mud when it rains.
- Clean up hay and other bedding that gets drug out of run-in stalls and into outdoor lots.
- Create drainage pits in your pens and fill with sand in any other low spots (in front of doors and gates).
- Monitor eating patterns. We have a horse that likes to push his hay to the run-in opening and then outside. Moving his hay to another spot in the run-in shed prevents him from rolling it outside and into the lot.
